The day came when "You're No Good" (recorded by Linda Ronstadt) was on the air and it was then that music stuck with me. With the passing of time, I developed some skills which eventually led me to songwriting. I started writing songs in 1997; and songwriting happened overnight for me; as if the gift was lying dormant and then burst upon the scene. The lyrics and music seemed to fit snugly as if they were destined to be as one. I decided to record some my songs so that my children could have something to talk about later in life. After I had my songs professionally recorded, I pitched them to my family and friends and the response was very positive. Since that time, I have sold my songs to people who requested copies. I have entered song contests, and I was a guest on the morning radio show at the local radio station where my songs were played on the air in 2006. I was unsure of what to do next and up against many unknowns, and it was then that I was contacted by a friend by the name of Robert Baitinger, to whom I owe many thanks for inspiring me to continue in what I had started. We shared stories, trials, trimuphs and our passion for music. Out of that friendship and support I picked up the pieces where I had left off and began on a new path. With the professional expertise of Producer/Musician/Artist Jeff Carson and his staff, as well as Producer/Musician Joe Milton and Singer Annagrey LaBasse, my songs were resurrected to new heights. That path has led me to offer two of my songs which I am proud to share with the world.
