He recently performed on The LA Living Show on KSCI TV, which is available in over 6.2 million homes across the US. His song, "Can We Love One and All?" has been frequently featured on Cerritos College radio and The Crossing Bridges TV Show. Mr. Kai also created and pioneered the Emerson style of songwriting. He was born and raised in New York City and now lives in Los Angeles. Mr. Kai performs and tours regularly throughout the country. At age 13, towering at 4'10", no one could have ever imagined that an eighth grader named Christopher Kai who wrote "No Interest in Music" in his yearbook, would one day record his first seven-song EP, perform on TV, and be heard on college radio. But its all true, and unlike industry artists like Alicia Keys or Christina Aguilera, who seem to have been born singing, Mr. Kai started rather late. He didn't write his first song until after graduating college and he had a very non-musical day job as a motivational speaker/self-help author before turning his full attention to singing and songwriting. But if James Blunt, the British soldier turned ballad singer, or Matt Kearney, who also started his career rather late can attest to, success is rooted in many different backgrounds.
