Web of Dreams is the 2003 release of instrumental guitar music from one of Australia's leading acoustic guitarists. His popularity is due to his remarkable skills as a guitarist, but mostly it's because of his unique music - passionate, emotional, evocative 15 MP3 Songs EASY LISTENING: Mood Music, FOLK: Folk Pop

Details: A leading exponent of contemporary acoustic guitar and a consummate performer - and he makes it look so easy! Michael's repertoire includes Jazz and Blues, Celtic and Australian Folk, Country, Classical and his own distinctive compositions, many of which have received national TV and radio exposure, as well as various major awards. Michael's unique style - distinctively Australian and highly original in its presentation - marks him as a performer not to be missed. Review of Web of Dreams "While this atmospheric CD is dreamlike, Australian guitar virtuoso Michael Fix keeps it real with his strong sense of melody and bold attack. Except for one of the best renditions of "Fever" you're ever likely to hear, all the compositions on his sixth release are originals. Some are straightforward jazzy or bluesy numbers, but most create stories in the mind, which is not surprising, as Fix has written music for movies. "Footprints in My Heart" has a '50s noir quality, augmented by Scott Brown's sultry flugelhorn, while the distorted reverb on "4 am" nails the queasy, fuzzy-brained feeling of a sleepless night. Jo Lack's soaring violin is featured on both "Passionfruit," which opens the CD, and the closing title track, which modulates from Fix's tender arpeggios to a hyperactive reel and back again, just like disparate dream associations that somehow cohere and make perfect sense."
