Details: From an early age it was apparent that Adrian Emberley was always meant to be on stage. Her earliest training was as a stage performer for Theater-in-the-Open but it wasn't long before she was writing sweet acoustic songs and performing them to the greater Boston audience at venues like Club Passim and other low-key establishments. At 15 years old she released her first full-length album "So Tempting" to critical acclaim. She has been playing for years with local heavy-hitters such as, Sarah Wheeler and Peter Black around the New England area. While studying songwriting at Berklee College of Music she assembled a band that includes, Calin Peters on Cello, Michael Dylan on bass and vocals, and Daniel Romans on the drumset. Now known as the Adrian Emberley Band, they have just released their debut EP LOVE to a packed house at TT the Bears Place on September 25, 2008. Adrian and her Berklee entourage are now ready to move beyond her humble beginnings in small coffee shops and take on larger, more formidable venues in Boston and beyond.
