The title of the album was chosen to better illustrate the idea that these tracks are merely snapshots taken along this, sometimes crazy, road we call life. The album is strongly based around the acoustic guitar, which is a reflection of how Matthew David Wheeler likes to write. The album consists of all original material and features the simple, catchy track called Someday, which was written about an old girlfriend that went off to college and Matthew David Wheelers optimistic thinking that things would be the same when she returned. The album also features songs like Lonely One and Lately which reflect on the bitter harshness of being alone. The song Lately describes how a new love interest can come along and somehow wipe the slate clean of all past romantic disasters.
