Details: Simon Hutchinson's music is an eclectic mix of a number of media and genres ranging from performance art to classical music. In 2002, Simon traveled to Northern Japan to work for the town of Towa in Iwate prefecture as a translator and teacher. In 2003, Simon began studying Northern Japanese folk music and the shamisen with virtuoso Satou Asao (Satou Chouei). This study had a significant impact on Simons rhythmic and melodic approach to his own compositions.
