Easy listening jazz music from the heart, that can touch the soul. 12 MP3 Songs EASY LISTENING: Mood Music, EASY LISTENING: Background Music Details: 9-28-2005 For Immediate Release Bryan Grant's Debut Collection of Pop Jazz Instrumentals Think Of Me Now Available Chicago-area composer Bryan Grant is pleased to announce the release of his debut CD Think Of Me. Grant is a self-taught pianist, whose dreamy, upbeat brand of easy listening is sure to please fans of instrumental pop composers like Jim Brickman and Yanni. Grant composed, arranged, and performed all the music on this 12-track release, which was recorded at Liquide Sounds Studio in Chicago. Lush, swirling production and playful melodies are the earmark of Grant's impressive collection Think of Me. The title track is a slow, thoughtful piano study accented by a chorus of soothing synths that captivate like waves crashing on the shore. The mid-tempo pick-me-up "Worth Taking" starts with catchy, upbeat piano and takes it soaring with airy cymbals and blasts of faint percussion sounding like the billowy steam of inspiration. Fans of the John Tesh brand of instrumental heroism will instantly recognize a kindred spirit in "Motion," though it's galloping beat and sea of atmospheric percussion never quite hit the sports theme master's thundering crescendos. In all, the 12 fresh tracks showcase Grant's considerable talent as a composer, but what makes this collection even more unique is the way that his optimistic, soothing nature shines through. Think of Me is Bryan Grant's first recording, but the talented composer's thirst to play music goes back to his childhood when he would visit his aunt's house and study his niece's piano lessons secondhand. Playing has been his passion ever since and always a priority even as he traveled the world in the military, and returned home to pursue a medical career. While he was in med school, his brother recruited him to join his band and playing live with other musicians would prove to be a turning point for him as a musician. "I learned chording and arranging patterns, and from that experience, started coming up with my own songs." His collection of original songs grew from there, and now, after years of wanting to make a CD, he decided that there was no better time than the present. Whether his future includes a record deal, soundtrack scoring, getting to hear his music performed with full orchestration, or simply recording more self-released CDs for appreciative listeners, Grant will continue to create music from his heart, with hopes of sharing it with others. "I would like to offer inspiring music that doesn't really tell you what to think - it let's you go ahead and reflect on your own. I'd like to provide that conduit to help you relax; to touch your soul." Audio samples and contact information are available at bryangrant.net
