Dark and quirky. The phrase aptly captures the essence of I Hate This Place's sophomore album Diversions. A new collaboration between keyboardist Sean Nerney and vocalist Erin Han, Diversions explores the more sinister side of the human psyche, the place that lies just beneath the bubblegum surface of 2004's "One Minute Mayhem". A world in which good and evil are the same, where the characters you meet are as funny as they are deadly, and as insanely happy as they are miserable. Sean's brooding synth textures and intricately crafted rhythms are a perfect match for Erin's haunting and powerful voice, while the lyrics of the songs they write evoke memories of a place we all know but have never crossed over to. A small white cat offers his paw. Will you take it...?
