french chanson with a touch of jazz and world led by a mystical songwriter. 9 MP3 Songs WORLD: Western European, POP: Folkly Pop Details: Yann-Gael Poncet started learning to play the violin very early. He was soon seduced by the post jazz improvization movement that was going on in France over the 90's and collaborated to many projects and recordings. It was around 2000 that he began to write songs, inspired by the strength he found in Gainsbourg or Nougaro's innovative works. He then left for India to learn what is called Carnatic Singing with Master Vittal Ramamurthy, and then went on discovering new sounds while travelling to the US, Brazil or Canada with a puppet theatre troupe (Foreign Landscapes) in which he would improvize on the violin. When he was back in France in 2003, he started working with renowned guitar player Jean-Paul Herv and Raphael Poly on the double bass. The trio quickly gained awards and praise in festivals where their 'strange' way of making songs was surprising and original. That's when Yann realized he was on some sort of mystical quest through his songs which very often refer to God or the Bible. Some concerts where nearly trance-like experiments where songs like "America is Mine", "The Giant", "The Empire" or "The Last Breath" would last as long as 15 minutes with amazingly inspired violin or bass choruses which would captivate the audience. In 2005, Yann decided it was time to make a proper record of the songs and start writing others. He then met Bruno Cariou from label Nemme (Amlie-les-crayons) and they started working together with newly arrived percussionist Nicolas Allemand. 2006 saw the release of the first album under the name "Poncet" and the beginning of a French tour which is to go on to july 2007. Still thirsty for new experiments, Yann-Gael was the lyrics writer and singer of a jazz-opera by David Linx called "The Techtonic of Clouds" which was presented live at the famous Vienne Jazz festival in june 2006.
