AVANT GARDE: Atonal, SPOKEN WORD: Storytelling Details: These songs and stories from down east Maine, komPleeeT the taleS of barbara toothpick and Alan HorseRadishs escape from NYCescape from their narrow city lives to a different world they helped create. The story?.....so there we were for ten years, poor, alone, with two kids, trying to reshape our lives. Cold, fighting with each other, at odds with the people we thought of as our community, in a strange environment, learning to be creators. These songs and introductions tell the storykitchen songs, car songs, dark of the moon songs, laughing songsall as real as the lives that spawned them. Most were written then, all emerged from that time.
.....and the music grew too. From the thin sound of the first two C. D.s, i, barbara, figured out what i think music is SOUND SCAPESlike the pictures we paint. Large splashes of sound sprinkled with dots of black, soft breezes of shhhhhhUHsh, strange swells of wind, background for a small lonely song. Sound Scapesthe way the human voice is reduced in the forest to one squeak of sound, or merged with the clang squeal shreeeeeeeeK of city streets. Not tonal, no formal structure, just Wilhelm Richard Wagners swells and retreats of sound surrounding the tiny defiant voice. For more of the WHO WHAT WHEN WHERE HOW WHY of barbara toothpick and Alan HorseRadish look at what i wrote for the first set of CDs, Maine Songs From a Different Head. You can also look at our web page at,
