An easy-listening, eclectic blend of love songs in British-style pop-blues, country-pop and orchestrated pop styles. 10 MP3 Songs COUNTRY: Country Pop, BLUES: English Style Details: DEBUT ALBUM... JAMES DAVIS - "Flying" If you are not hung up on specific "GENRES", do like heartfelt vocals, great musical arrangements of great songs, and intelligent lyrics, then you will love this album. Orphaned at the age of 16, James Davis migrated to Australia from Britain in 1970 with just $100, an old guitar and a pile of books. His lonesome struggle to survive in his new country etched a few scars on his personality and some of these are reflected in his soulful vocals as heard on this, his debut CD. The 10 tracks on this album combine pop-blues tracks (such as "Black Magic Woman", and the traditional folk song "Alberta") with Bob Dylan pop-folk ("If Not For You"), and orchestrated pop-folk ("Streets of London"), and easy-listening country-pop songs ("Green, Green Grass Of Home", "Always On My Mind" and the Don McLean classic "And I Love You So") in an honest, sincere vocal, combined with sensitive arrangements. The blues-influenced song "Isn't It A Pity", by George Harrison, laments the failure of human beings to treat everyone equally with respect and dignity. The James Davis original composition "Flying" is a bluesy love song that evokes the feelings of emptiness after a fractured love affair; it emphasizes the ethereal craving to return home to a happier past life.
