COUNTRY: Bluegrass, COUNTRY: Country Folk Details: We took on this project the winter of 06-07. Our working title was A Storms a Comin. That seemed to fit since just about every time we went in to record or mix, a big winter storm was either moving in or had just moved out. Probably just another one of those situations of a sign gone unheeded. We ended up calling this one Dont Play No Slow Songs. Thats a pretty good description of our sound. Now, dont get me wrong, we have a lot of songs that were written slow in our repertoire. Its just that we take them up to the tempo where they ought to be. The band talent has Paul on guitar, playing the slide steel on a Tear My Stillhouse Down and Headed South. Those notes just ooze straight from his brain to the strings; its an amazing thing to watch. Brother Matt can play just about anything with strings. Well, he cant play a puppet but thats another story. These days hes settled on the upright bass and whether hes pluckin or slappin, the sounds up right all the way. Terri is our lead singer and when you hear her youll know why, that girl can sing! Also, people tend to not throw things as much when shes out front. Me, I just play the banjo, working on it for twenty-some odd years now, still trying to turn it into a paying job. On the songs, it tells who takes the lead on each one but on most youll hear us all in there somewhere. When were harmonizing, Pauls usually in the tenor/baritone range, Matts giving it that high lonesome sound, Terris wherever we need her and I bring in the bass. Weve got a couple of originals on this one, Matts Joshua King and my What Was I Thinkin?, hope you enjoy those!

Special thanks go out to our Recording Engineer, Ryan Nowels of the Jazz Lab in Edmond, America. We gave him a tough challenge; make us sound like we do when were live, but make us sound good. Mix it but dont make it sound like its been mixed. He held up his end of the deal. Thanks to Jack and Bud for coming to all our rehearsals and gigs. As always, thanks to our families, the worlds greatest, for putting up with us and letting us have our fun. Thanks to the Lord, we hope Hes our biggest Fan! Steve
