He started playing guitar just for fun when he was thirteen. He wanted to learn how to play Bossa Nova, the charming and recently established trend in Brazil. There werent many guitarists capable of playing Bossa Nova in its beauty and complexity! But his love for Bossa Nova and Antonio Carlos Jobims rich, unique, and beautiful music helped him master the style, which he now plays with grace and proficiency. In 1997, Edson moved to the United States and since then has performed in Oregon as a soloist and with his band Sun Bossa. In April 2008, Edson finished his cd on Antonio Carlos Jobim music. Edson knows in his heart that no one can play Jobims music better than Jobim himself has done. That said, Edson keeps things simple by either conveying Jobims ideas or introducing a few ideas of his own. Edsons guitar often sounds like a small orchestra from which you can hear lines suitable for violins, or cellos. People who are interested in Stan Getz Joo Gilberto should consider this download.
