World folk for kids 21 MP3 Songs KIDS/FAMILY: General Children's Music, KIDS/FAMILY: Kid Friendly
Details: Engaging multi-rhythmic music and inspiring lyrics invite children, parents and teachers a little deeper into the human story through the wisdom of Do Re Mi Dragon. The more you hear it, the better it gets and the deeper it goes. This joyful composition is a tribute to emerging new templates in education, family and community life. Paul Andrew Zeir has spent most of his life gathering and composing songs from all over the world. His mission, along with his gifted partner Melanie, is to instill in young people the natural gift of music and dance as integrated development and connective media for an evolving human life. Talking Hands Talking Feet is part of an emerging new template in children's music and dance education. Our belief is that music and dance can be used as vehicles to bring out and enhance the quality and character of each human life in development. Our aim is to give children the tools to be able to express themselves in the language of music, song and dance whilst fostering their self-confidence, enthusiasm and instinct for learning about themselves, their bodies, the world and the planetary environment. The produce generated from this process is prodigious and prolific, and includes an exciting multi-dimensional curriculum, original songs, story dances, musical suites, and dance choreography. This includes our first compilation of children's music, the Rainbow Train CD, winner of the Parent's Choice Award, and our second compilation, newly released, Do Re Mi Dragon.
