"Does your dog bark and whine constantly? Does it destroy your house, furniture or clothes?" up to 35 percent of dogs suffer from separation anxiety - and Your dog could be one of them! If youre tired of the constant struggle with your dog whenever you leave your home; if youre sick of coming home to find that your dog has damaged your house; if you want to put a stop to your dogs constant barking and whining, then this is the most important website you will ever visit. If you are like I was in this situation, then youve probably tried everything. You love your dog, an adorable pet that has become a trusted member of your family. But theres a serious problem: every time you leave your dog home alone, it goes into a destructive frenzy that is threatening your relationship with your pet. Youre at your wits end. I'm sure you know the symptoms: your dog whines or barks constantly. Your dog tears up furniture, chews through drywall, damages your possessions and goes after almost anything within reach. And it happens when you leave your dog at home all alone. Youre At Your Wits End But Dont Give Up Yet! Believe it or not, your dog may be suffering a clinical condition called dog separation anxiety. Its the same separation anxiety that children go through when they leave home to start attending school, or when parents go off to work and leave the child with a baby sitter or at day care. But while all a child does is cry from separation anxiety, dogs can go on a rampage that can cost hundreds, if not thousands of dollars in damage to your home. Its not fair to the dog; its not fair to you and it not a productive relationship with your pet! You didnt dream of having a dog one day only to find that its become a nightmare, did you? Of course not! You wanted a pet that adorable dog you fell in love with when you first saw them as a puppy. And now you want that dog back. Well I am here to tell you that you can reclaim your pet. You can finally put an end to the damage and destruction. You can stop the constant whining and barking. And if you know what to do, it can be a simple process that builds a loving relationship with your dog! Ok, so what is dog separation anxiety? Dog separation anxiety is a serious behavioral problem that can cause tremendous stress, not only for your dog, but for you as well! It can occur in dogs of all ages, and sadly, it is one of the main reasons that dog owners give up their beloved pets for adoption, or worse, have their pet euthanized. According to DogPsychologyHelp.com, up to 35 of dogs suffer from separation anxiety. And sadly, this percentage is way too high and totally preventable. Before you can determine if YOUR dog has dog separation anxiety, lets look at some of the symptoms: *Does your dog whine or bark incessantly? *Does your dog pace, chew furniture, destroy window coverings, rip up carpeting, eat through drywall, mutilate plants or scratch at windows and doors? *Does your dog injure itself through its destructive behavior? *Does your dog jump on you and your guests? This often leads to ruined and dirty clothes and can even result in scratched skin. *Does your dog get jealous and growl or attack people near you... this can include small children... who love to pet "any" dog? Dogs with severe separation anxiety may urinate and defecate all over your home. These poor animals can even cause themselves great harm by jumping through plate glass windows to try and escape your house to find you! (This is true! Some dogs have actually died due to untreated separation anxiety). Does your pet have any of the above symptoms? If so please keep reading... Come on - be honest. If you answered, yes to any of these questions, and it happens especially when you leave your dog alone, your dog may be suffering from dog separation anxiety. why do some dogs develop separation anxiety while others dont? Nobody really knows why it impacts some dogs and not others. It really doesnt matter if your dog is in a one-pet home, or there are multiple pets. But it may be more likely to happen if your dog has a history of abuse or has lived in multiple homes. It also may happen if your dog has missed out on normal social interaction with people and other animals especially as puppies. But the most important thing to remember is that it is not your fault if your dog is suffering from dog separation anxiety. The most important thing is to begin curing your dog as quickly as possible. Nobody wants a dog to be suffering from separation anxiety. It isn't your fault; it isn't your dog's fault. However, you do owe it to your pet and yourself, to treat your dog's separation anxiety. And it is completely treatable, if you know the simple steps to make this possible! So, How can you help me? Hi, my name is Stephanie Abel. I'm an avid dog lover and I have a 20-month-old German Shepherd. His name is Peter, a loving member of my family and we just adore him! We got Peter from a neighbor when he was just 2-months old, and by the time he was 8 months the problems with Peter began when. It all started around the time I had to start leaving home for my new job. Peter would start whining while I was getting ready for work, and after I left he began to destroy everything in sight. Despite putting him in an indoor kennel, Peter started biting the wires, and whining the entire time I was gone (I set up a camera to film him while I was out - I highly suggest you do the same). Finally, we realized that Peter was suffering from separation anxiety. We put him on medication, and I began looking for information on how to help him. There wasn't any! So I went on a mission, like some sort of mad woman, to learn everything I could about the condition. I spent countless late nights trying to unravel the mysteries of this disease, and get to the bottom of it. After seeing that there simply was very little information available for dog owners whose dogs suffered from separation anxiety, I decided to help my fellow dog lovers by creating a course to teach others how to understand and treat this condition. Curing Dog Separation Anxiety is the culmination of my work. Using this course is like having me in your home, looking over your shoulder and telling you what to do to help your dog become a happy, healthy member of your family. In Curing Dog Separation Anxiety, you'll gain insight into dog separation anxiety, and learn important information that can help you deal with the problem, including: *The main factors that may have contributed to your dog's separation anxiety *Which dogs may be at high risk to suffer from separation anxiety *Why a dog's destructive behavior is NOT an attempt to get revenge on their owner for leaving them alone The key symptoms to look for to help diagnose dog separation anxiety Which breeds are more prone to suffer from separation anxiety - something you really must know if you're looking for a new dog What behaviors to watch for from your dog when you return home Knowing these important factors will help you not only confirm whether or not your dog is suffering from separation anxiety, but which dogs you might want to consider avoiding if you're currently looking for a new pet! Is your puppy reacting like this when you leave? Does it break your heart to walk away? (did you know this crying can go on for hours?) Does Your Dog Have Separation Anxiety? Curing Dog Separation Anxiety will help you sort through the myriad of symptoms and determine whether your pet is suffering from separation anxiety. You'll learn the key risk factors associated with separation anxiety. But you'll also learn something even more important how to lower the risk factors of separation anxiety. You'll learn risk-lowering secrets like:

- *When to vaccinate your dog
- *The number one protective factor to have in your home
- *What helps lower stress and improve obedience scores
- *How to use pheromones to lower anxiety risk

But there's so much more packed inside the almost 90 full pages of Curing Dog Separation Anxiety. You'll have information at your fingertips to help you diagnose whether or not your dog has separation anxiety, including a comprehensive list of clinical symptoms. To help you understand how veterinarians diagnose separation anxiety, Curing Dog Separation Anxiety even includes a comprehensive questionnaire along with an interpretation section. Veterinarians use these questionnaires to determine not only if a dog has separation anxiety, but also to what degree from mild to moderate to severe. Before you rush off to your Vet and pay hundreds of dollars for a diagnosis, why not try my course first? If you can detect separation anxiety, corrective measures can be taken before the condition gets worse. The earlier you treat the problem, the less severe it will become, and a better outcome will be reached. And the good news is that separation anxiety can be successfully treated, through behavior modification and medication. But first you have to know that the dog actually is suffering from separation anxiety, and not from boredom. Why have medication AND behavior modification? Why not one or the other? Well, it's important to know that each one plays an important role in your dog's treatment. Most often, the medication is used to help your dog relax, so it can concentrate on performing the behavior modification exercises. It's really important to note, that it's the exercises that will help change your dog's response to stressful situations over time! In Curing Dog Separation Anxiety, you'll learn:

- *Which medications are used to treat dog separation anxiety
- *Why medications must be given regularly, and not just when your dog seems anxious
- *Why it may take a long time for the medications to work, and why you need to follow a structured program of behavior modification to increase their effectiveness

The fact is the only method that will offer long-term relief is behavior modification. Curing Dog Separation Anxiety provides you with multiple behavior modification techniques that can help your dog overcome the separation anxiety that's ruining your relationship with your pet. Some basic techniques you'll learn in this book include:

- *How to enrich the surroundings to make your pet at ease
- *How to implement reward relaxation
- *Why downplaying your departure can help your dog relax *Why changing the type of dog toys can help reduce pet anxiety *How changing your routine when you return home can help *How to use exercise and mental stimulation to calm your dog

Home Alone Curing Dog Separation Anxiety devotes a lot of coverage to helping you change your routines. You'll learn, step-by-step, how to leave your home and how to return home all in an effort to minimize your dog's anxiety response. Think about it your dog sees you go to your closet and take out a coat he or she knows you're about to leave the house. It's a learned response, because dogs are creatures of habit. So Curing Dog Separation Anxiety shows you how to alter that routine; how to change it up so your dog doesn't begin the separation anxiety before you even leave the house! You'll find that Curing Dog Separation Anxiety is filled with tips, tricks and secrets that will help that behavior modification process go smoothly, and change your leaving the house from a period of bedlam to a period of calm. Some of these tips and tricks include: *What type of exercise to use with your dog *When to feed your dog to help calm him *What type of sounds to leave on when you leave home *What types of toys and distractions to leave for your dog *Why an anti-bark citronella collar may help reduce anxiety barking - plus many other tips to treat anxiety barkers! *Using aromatherapy and pheromones to calm your dog

One of the most important things you'll learn in Curing Dog Separation Anxiety is how to build tolerance to staying alone for your dog. It can't just happen it takes time to build up to that feeling of being alone, and there is a step-by-step method to employ to help build that tolerance over time. Another critical component that you'll need to learn are the techniques needed to minimize your dog's anxiety prior to your departure. It's called desensitizing departures, and it's an important technique to have. But it's just one of the many behavior modification techniques you'll find in Curing Dog Separation Anxiety. Other techniques covered in the book include: *When to implement exercise before your departure *What type of behavior to avoid using on your part when you come back home *The healthy way to get your dog to earn the attention it craves *Where and When to reward your dog for appropriate behavior *What steps you must take each day before you leave the house to ensure your dog's behaviour improves This includes a remarkable six-Step anxiety action plan that you can learn and implement to help reduce your dog's symptoms and get them used to your leaving the house! You'll find these and other beneficial techniques in the pages of Curing Dog Separation Anxiety. But there's so much more a wealth of information and techniques that will help you resolve your dog's separation anxiety problem once and for all. Just look: *The 5 special tips to use with excessively barking dogs *3 special diet tips to help with anxious dogs *Alternative and holistic health aids to help calm your pet *7 additional steps you can take with a particularly difficult dog A Real World Routine So much is covered - chapter after chapter, in dealing with your dogs anxiety and in behavior modification. But what about doing something to help prevent separation anxiety before it happens? Thats another place that Curing Dog Separation Anxiety can help! Youll learn what is called acclimation training how to get your dog used to his or her new surroundings the proper way! Youll learn what to do and what steps to take when you bring home your dog or puppy for the first time. Youll learn the proper way to acclimate your pet to its surroundings step by step! Youll learn how to get your dog used to not having you at his or her side, along with techniques that can produce calm, relaxed behavior. Another area of prevention that may be helpful is crating your dog. Before you throw up your hands and react to this as cruel, its important for you to realize that your dogs natural instinct is to be a den animal. When a dog is in the wild, a den is where they sleep, hide from danger and raise a family. A crate is like that den it becomes your dogs refuge a favorite place to go when its used properly. The truth is, if you have a destructive dog, then a crate to confine it is a very effective option while you modify his or her behavior - but ONLY if you know how to use this tool correctly. If you don't, you could very easily cause your dog far greater distress. In the pages of Curing Dog Separation Anxiety, youll learn key points about crates and crating, including: *What types of crates are available, and how to match the crate to your dog *What sized crate is right for your dog *How to crate you dog correctly to modify its behaviour *Special tips when crating puppies *When NOT to use crates (Important!) In addition to these helpful tips and tricks, youll also learn step-by-step, the entire crate training process. Curing Dog Separation Anxiety will take you through the crate training, from introducing your dog to the crate to feeding your dog in the crate to how to increase the crate time for your dog. For dog separation anxiety, youll also learn the correct method of crating your dog when you leave the house, and what to do when you return home. Invariably, problems do come up when crating your dog. These potential problems can add to the dogs anxiety, so its best to know about them and Curing Dog Separation Anxiety will show you what problems can occur, and what to do about them. Curing Dog Separation Anxiety is your separation bible chapter after chapter and page after page of what you need to know, what can happen and what to do if your dog suffers from separation anxiety. If youre a dog lover; if you have a new dog or if youre planning on getting a dog, this is a must-have book in your library.
