Absolutely don't buy this CD. It will break your heart in two. 9 MP3 Songs POP: Dream Pop, POP: Dark Wave Details: This is a story about self-hurting, pink rabbits, bleeding birdies and a promise for eternity. Beware: this story may break your heart in two. It has been written, performed and produced by Andrea Liuzza, a 24 years old songwriter from Venezia, Italy. Despite the extremely personal nature of his work, this CD has touched people and critics... ah ah ah romantics! "This CD mixes the alchemical delirium of electronic and the delicate intimacy of acoustic music with words like signs/senses. This CD has a soul" wrote Losthighways.it. "A fucked-up kind of pure. The thin layer of urgency and catharsis that ties this record together is disarming" wrote Sean Welker. "Raw music and real emotion that burn likes Radiohead fronted by Lisa Germano covering early Patrick Wolf demos. A masterpiece" wrote The Devil Has The Best Tuna. ... so here's a limited edition CD with a 8 pages booklet including lyrics and pictures. For you, romantics and wolves aware that those pink rabbits weren't real. WHAT ABOUT ANDREA? He has released another album of songs, Countless Ways For Pressing Flowers, winning the Italian Indie 2007 contest, as well as soundtracks and a sound-installation. He will be glad to know you personally so feel free to contact him: andrealiuzza[at]gmail.com. He's lazy, but will answer to any sincere mail.
