Details: Playing piano since age 5 and singing and writing songs for almost as long, Angelena now performs, teaches and composes from her home in Northern California. "Jesus Free Zone" is a collection of materials from my early twenties when I was very disillusioned with the world-wide. I was just discovering how hard it was to be an artist in a country that doesn't value art, underemployed in various sweatshops and offices that I hated, and I was on a journey of recovery from the harmful effects of being brought up Baptist towards a very pagan spiritual outlook. I was an angry person to say the least. A big part of how I got through with things was sitting down at the piano and banging, screaming, crying, whispering out my problems, my truths. Somewhere in there, I found peace." "The amazing thing is, I occasionally sit down and listen to the album and am taken aback at the quality of work I was producing then. I'm still proud of it." Angelena is at work on a new album entitled "Let it Go" due to be released before the end of 2005. Visit her web site at angelena.net
