Details: I hope that I touch someone, the way that theyve touched me. For those of you who have followed Heaths career through the years, and have his first solo CD, you have heard that quote before. Its a line from one of his early songs called, Heroes Heartaches. Within that song; Heath talks about his early idols and influences in country music, Keith Whitley and George Strait. And in that single, honest, emotional, and humbling line, Heath clearly spells out why he does what he does. I want to touch peoples emotions. I want my music to go beyond the ears and deep into their thoughts and hearts. Thats what music has always done for me my whole life. Its been a release, its been a safe harbor, its been a big brother and a confidant. Ive shed tears and drank beers because of music. Ive been able to say some things to people, especially girls, through music that in my younger years I never would have been able to on my own. I have those artists and those songs that I just crave when the mood strikes. That line in Heroes Heartaches is very heartfelt for me. I want to touch people, the way that my heroes music touched me. I want to give back to others through my own music everything that music has given me over the years. Never being satisfied with status-quo, Fagen is pushing himself vocally and creatively. Already hitting the studio with follow up songs, his newest single being a duet which will mark another first for this artist. He continues to grow and pursue his passion, not to become rich, not to become the most well known artist ever; rather, his passion is to give to people through his music, the very same thing that music has given him his entire life. Giving back man, thats what its about. If one of my songs can do for someone what some of my favorite songs have done for me and continue to do for me, then I'm successful! If a label never signs me, I've still made it as long as I continue to get emails and letters from fans telling me how or why one of my songs is important to them. That's success in my eyes! Whether it's the hard working, Midwestern roots, or the very modest upbringing, or his personal life's trials; whatever it is, this guy has some kind of something that draws you in. Spend any amount of time with him and you just want him to succeed. His voice is believable, his songs are from the heart, and he himself, is real. You get charisma, charm, wit, and a sincere genuineness, all wrapped in a package that just wants to be something special to someone else and touch as many lives along the way as he can. Dare I say how refreshing that is in today's world. He deserves all his blessings he's been given, and all the blessings yet to come, and he will certainly be a blessing to others. Ya know, sometimes, the nice guy really should finish first! Never has that been more evident than with this artist.
