Lara MEEKS-WILLIAMS (Vocalist) Born in Itta Bena, Mississippi, Lara began singing and dancing in talent shows at church and school. She won first place two years straight in high school. In her senior year in High School, she starred in the theatrical play "Curtains Going Up", which launched her acting career. She also participated in the Chorus for a school production at the Ebony Showcase Theatre in Los Angeles. Lara was a member of Little Zion MBC, the Rev. Jerome Fisher, Pastor, and sang in the choir, while attending Long Beach City college. She was also the female lead vocalist in a secular band "Rapid Transit." The band won first place in a talent show, and soon after recorded a demo single. While a member of "Rapid Transit," Lara had her first experience as a songwriter. Then while singing lead for a vocal trio (that was un-named and included two guys), Lara received an offer for a recording contract, which she declined because of her full time student status at California State University Dominguez Hills, and the contract required a two-year commitment. Also the record contract didn't include the other members of the trio and Lara didn't want to go it alone. The trio never performed anywhere but in the living room, but the experience helped Lara to embrace her gift of music. Lara was a member of the choir for the live recording of Rebecca McCallaugh's "God is My Strength In Song" album. After college she became a member of the Calvary MBC of Pacoima, Rev. William T. Broadous, Pastor, and was a member of "The Voices of Calvary" choir. She was also a member of the Lakeview Terrace "Voices of Praise" (VOP) gospel group, and participated in a live album recording with the group of original music that never became fruitful. Lara credits the church for allowing her to utilize her gifts in the theater as well. She starred and performed in church productions of: "Highway to Heaven", and "Can't you see that I have Changed". Both productions allowed her to utilize her vocal and acting talents. Lara also has a Master's Degree from Azusa Pacific University Geneva WALKER (Vocalist) As a child in her hometown of Saginaw, Michigan, Geneva attended Mount Olive Baptist Church on Sundays with her mom, and a sanctified church during the week with her father.
