Details: Montreal, September 14th, 2008 After two years of composing, rehearsing and recording, Olivier Adoue walks along a new path towards a more poetic sound with his second release La grce matine . With its acoustic instrumentation, French and English texts and a strong dose of improvisation, La grce matine stays true to the acoustic character of the first release, Pche aux rves . However, this time around the Montrealer devoted more creative energy towards lyrics and musical arrangements. He also invited a dozen local musicians to participate on the recording, which adds to the diversity of musical textures. The result is a folky-jazz sound coupled with world music influences. The album was recorded in part at The Treatment Room studio and at Productions Calendule studio in Montreal. Productions Calendule also acts as an independent music label for the CD. The mixing was done by Olivier Adoue at Productions Calendule studio. Ryan Moorey, who has mastered releases from Arcade Fire and Jean Leloup, assured that there was a dynamic and even flow from one song to the next. The music was mastered at Ryebread Mastering Studio in Montreal using analog equipment and recorded to quarter inch tape before being transferred to digital media. The albums overall sound is akin to a morning light which is enveloped by vocal harmonies, a fairy-like mandolin, exotic middle-eastern percussion and a mellow brass section. At times, the text leads one to reflection, as in the Bob Dylan inspired Its okay to feel lonely . Other tunes such as La grce matine and Rhymes and time describe trials and tribulations in story form. In another light, the tale of an extra-terrestrial being vacationing on earth in Alien blues and a mile-end hipster that rarely leaves his neighborhood in La moiti du monde bring about a comedic air to the collection of songs.
