ELECTRONIC: Dance, ELECTRONIC: Techno Details: Sucumbio ----- Graham Booth (synthesizer, vocals, production) There is everything, and nothing. One's expression must be flavored by all that it is not. This leaves much unsaid, but... I can promise this: honesty about the self is at the heart of everything you see and hear. Music and expression are fundamental. Picturesque landscapes of emotion can only be harnessed for moments at a time. We live for those moments, really. The piano has always been my canvas of choice; such an immediate response to this... everything. Sounds blend together in life to create a life of its own and this is my fascination. ----- Dede Booth -aka- Sententia (drums, guitars, vocals) Dede Booth started her journey into music by way of a practice pad and the thunderous reverberations of a simulated bass drum (her bed.) Adding her intuitive rhythms to her older brother's pianistic resulted in endless creation. As time went on and Graham moved to college, Dede began to explore her interest in other instruments. "I'm a drummer, first." Ok, Dede. But, despite her affluence with percussion this has not served to impede her progression as a musician, rather it has encouraged it to grow. She started with guitar work, mainly electric, then to acoustic. A recently graduated music industry major, Dede continues to work on and perform several varieties of music. Her collaborative efforts with Sucumbio may be challenged by 1000 miles distance to the Gulf Coast, but thanks be, that hasn't stopped them from writing together. ----- James Verlinde (guitar samples - 'Drown') Bridget Booth (post production, vocals - 'Drown') Chris Tringali (post production, creative advisory)
