His lyrics are colorful, clever, and brutally honest, accompanied by refreshingly catchy melodies. Born and raised in Edmonton, Alberta, Jordan began building up an extensive repertoire of original songs throughout his teens. He took his first steps in his music career in 2001, heading up the band "Tuesday Can't Tell", doing shows in and around the city. But after four years of on-again off-again gigging and recording, Jordan decided it was time to head off on his own to pursue a solo career. In 2007 he met producer/engineer Phil Anderson (Tupelo Honey, Keating, Long Way Down) and producer/mixer Nick Blagona (Cat Stevens, Deep Purple, David Usher, Goo Goo Dolls) and started work on his debut self-titled album. The album is now complete and hitting the shelves in October and Jordan Lee is ready to introduce himself to the world.
