EMILY IS first and foremost, a wordsmith. since the time she talk, emily has been writing poetry, essays and songs. with a degree in journalism, emily has found in creative expression a form of abstract journalism, using performance as a medium to explore her political, sensual and intellectual inquiries. with a belief that music is an essential unifying and uplifting agent, emily makes sure that every day and every night is life. LIFE VOCALIZED. From The Hartford Courant, July 25, 2004: "The ethos of Sully's [Pub in Hartford] is perhaps best summed up by the performance of Emily Morse. Waifish in appearance with an orb of curls atop her head, Morse is the unofficial poet laureate of Sully's, and her spirit fills the room. She freestyles to a heavy beat provided by Megofna and Johnny Chang on drums. With eyes closed and head to the ceiling, it's equal parts fun, powerful, poetic and captivating."
