What if the paintings had songs? Multi-instrumentalist and painter JRJ answers this question with 10 elegant yet powerful instrumental compositions that feature the Zendrum, Chapman Stick, Wind synth and beautiful cover art. 10 MP3 Songs WORLD: World Fusion, ELECTRONIC: Virtual Orchestra Details: This music is about finding out. Exploring the inner territory, going down deep into the dreamtime and bringing back songs. The same way a painter might improvise a series sketches and then continue to refine them until reaching some sort of resolution I have used a number of different instruments including Zendrum, Chapman Stick, acoustic and electric guitar, wind controller, synthesizer, electronic drums and percussion to chart this course. And I made the paintings and drawings as well. It has been nothing less than a small odyssey to emerge here. But not an odyssey of outward experiences. Rather the opposite has produced these works. Instead of smokey bars and music gigs as my rite of passage. (All things I tried to do but never worked out.) It was the alone trajectory. The paper, brushes, colors of paint , sound and yoga, meditation and mountains that were the north stars, and guiding wands to these magical domains. There are no regrets and no turning back. I don't think this music is quite like anything else. I had a revelation early on about creative pursuits; If you follow your creative spirit it will lead you through the personal intimate territory of your self. If you follow long enough, far enough, the personal falls away. It's not you anymore. But something more pure. jrj
