Rock, Pop, Indie 5 MP3 Songs POP: Power Pop, ROCK: Modern Rock Details: From the time he could remember, Justin Avery (vocals and keys) spent every free second that he could in his fathers northern Michigan night club. Year after year, he drew influence from the countless musicians and performers that he had encountered. By the end of his senior year in high school, his father had hired the new summer band to come play at the club. That is when Justin first met Brett Farkas (guitar) and Joe Ayoub (bass), two young college students from down state. During the course of the summer, the three guys became mutual fans of each others musicality. Even though Farkas and Ayoub were in a band of their own, they created a musical bond with Avery that would last for years to come. The following year, Farkas and Ayoub's band broke up. The two stuck together and immediately recruited Avery for a new collaboration. Their highly anticipated group quickly made a buzz in their small college town. They continued to record and tour throughout the Midwest until their own personal lives took them into separate directions across the US. Even with the disappointing disbandment, the boys always knew that they would reunite someday soon. In the fall of 2005, it became a reality when the three old friends re-emerged in Los Angeles, CA as Population Game. Their unique musical bond was stronger and more urgent than ever as they quickly composed a slew of new originals. By the summer of 2006, they released their self produced, self titled EP and began creating a devout fanbase by playing such notable LA venues as the Viper Room, the Derby, Molly Malones, and most recently, completing a weekly residency at the Mint in which they filmed and recorded a live concert DVD. Monopoly, Chutes and Ladders, Battle Ship.....Population Game?
