Deep virtuosity meets acoustic psychedelic chill, a new sound connecting the power of nature and the human heart. 9 MP3 Songs WORLD: Celtic, WORLD: Flamenco Details: The Medicine Path (Famous in Mongolia and Lost in Tierra del Fuego) is the culmination of a 35 year spiritual search. At the age of twenty, Michael chose to follow music as a spiritual practice rather than a profession. During ten years of travel, he sought to understand and connect with the source of great music and musicians, as well as to understand the spiritual and cultural evolution of his western heritage. This took him through Europe, Africa, Mexico and the United States, always looking to find musicians with a similar approach. In the early 90s, after over twenty years of playing, Michael encountered the Amazonian healing ceremonies and their sacred chants, and was profoundly moved by the deep connection with the spirits of nature that he had known growing up in the remote forests of coastal British Columbia. Shortly after, he wrote his first composition (Earthgate the opening track on Famous in Mongolia), and G for Goddess. He sensed he had moved ahead musically. He played with no further advancement until the fall of 2004. Two weeks before participating in his second Amazonian healing ceremony, the music began to flow again. Thus, after 33 years of playing and composing only two songs, the rest of the music on The Medicine Path began to arrive, and did not stop until the spring of 2006. During this period, working with the Shipibo master healer Guillermo Arevalo, Michael experienced a complete disintegration of his previous approach to music. I feel as if I started in the mountains and followed the tributaries through the valleys long and far enough, and then one day finally reached the sea. In front of me was the same sight that had inspired all my musical heroes. This experience led to the decision to record the music and begin playing it publicly.
