URBAN/R&B: R&B Pop Crossover, LATIN: General Details: Reggaeton is a type of Spanish language dance music developed in Puerto Rico in the mid-1990s. It has now become popular in other Latin American countries. Reggaeton - also spelled Reggaetn and hispanicised as Regueta - blends dancehall and hip hop genres, with additional influences from electronic, bomba, plena, and other styles. This gives Reggaeton its distinct Latin touch. Reggaeton songs cover topics ranging from the realities of street life to personal misunderstandings, gangs, love, and dancing. It is a very popular choice of music in parties and is usually danced by members of the opposite sex grinding "doggie style". Reggaeton can also be danced with the partners facing each other, or in large groups of single dancers (usually females), where one of the group will then be asked to dance and will then leave the group.
