Dark and powerful electronica that comes across like the soundtrack to all your favourite dystopian nightmares. 10 MP3 Songs ELECTRONIC: Industrial, ELECTRONIC: Illbient Details: Gusto Extermination Fluid is a reflection of the spiraling madness that is 21st century humanity and a witness to its final descent into hate-fueled oblivion: Gusto Zest, enjoyment, relish or vigour. Archaic style of artistic execution. Extermination Destroy utterly. Get rid of; eliminate. Complete destruction. Fluid Able to flow alter shape freely. Constantly changing or fluctuating. GEF is the work of PT who previously operated in 90s industrial noise band Sonic Violence, once described as the soundtrack to your favourite Orwellian nightmare. The intervening years have been mainly spent foraging in the sanctuary of the hedgerows. Meanwhile: The dumb have got dumber. The greed-heads have got greedier. The doomed still havent realised theyre doomed. And we are increasingly controlled by psychopaths. The Cleaner is an album that combines old school industrial, electronica, dark ambient and dub and pushes them into new sonic places. Sounding like the musical accompaniment to a film centred on urban decay and life in a soulless post-everything society, The Cleaner takes the listener on a journey through the wasteland of modern life. From the powerful body hit of tracks like Wound and Hurone B to the brooding dark ambience of Pileus and Bees Tick, The Cleaner undulates with the menace and dread of the world that lurks beneath the surface. Musical points of reference would be Future Sound of Londons Dead Cities (if the hippy shtick was buried alive), Scorn, Terminal Cheesecake, Einstrzende Neubauten and Test Dept.
