She soon formed the band, Tango Bravo, and was signed to Mushroom Records. They toured and supported such acts as Bob Geldorf, and Aussie heroes John Farnham, Paul Kelly and Dragon. In 1989 she relocated to Los Angeles with a new band, Cry Charity, and in 1992 released the album "Peace, Love, Humiliation" on Morgan Creek Records. Tracy continued session singing for other artists including the Latin rock band Jaguares and country performer Hal Ketchum, but was still longing for the freedom to write, produce and express her own music. Fortunately with the advance of digital technology Tracy established her own recording studio in Studio City and she began producing music soundtracks for film and TV. The songs on "Dragonfly" are a labor of love created over time from 2001 to 2003. All the tracks were featured on the TV show "Passions" and some of the material is currently being re-recorded by other artists including R&B artist Billy Griffin and dance vocalist, Elleeven. Tracy has written and produced tracks for Elleeven's CD entitled "Funky Bohemia" as well as recorded and produced Mezzo-Soprano Tiffany Carmel and composer, pianist, Ruby Fradkin. Her commercial tracks are currently airing in Australia, Canada, the US and other parts of the world.
