Details: Gina Holsopples inauspicious beginnings as a Mennonite girl growing up in the middle of the Kansas prairie gives Ginas voice a soul that is tough to find in this fast-paced world. Music has always been a part of Ginas life, from Sunday mornings to Friday evening jam sessions with the rest of her family and whoever else happened along for the evening. Gina began playing piano in third grade, picked up the violin in fourth and settled on the guitar as her favorite when she was 16. After graduating from high school Gina made her way to a small town in Indiana to continue studying music. Spending four years working to become a classically trained musician was enough to send Gina right into New York Citys east village where she became a regular at all of the anti-folk open mic nights. However, a Mennonite girl from the middle of Kansas can only last so long in the big city and she again finds herself in a small town in central New York. Here she spends a good deal of time gardening, canning, quilting and harvesting wild edibles. Throughout this time, Gina has continued to make music a central part of her life. Performing across the country, releasing 5 albums, and working on a 6th to be released this spring has kept her on her toes. Ginas clear vocals and down-home sound have become a favorite for fans from New York to Minnesota and Chicago to Baltimore. Her lyrics have been highly commended by both reviewers and fans. As an accomplished musician, songwriter and performer her music has been described as captivating, inspiring and ethereal with a sense of longing. So listen closely. Ginas lyrical, acoustic musical style is nothing less than enchanting. Holsopple gives us acoustic guitar, lyrics that encompass the personal and social activism, and a sweet voice whose self-harmonies are smooth and warm.
