Details: The most anticipated garifuna album of all times is finally here. Though he recorded well over 40 songs, 16 songs were strategically chosen to be put on the album. " I didn't want to put songs on the album just because it had been recorded. I had to make sure that each song went with the other. I didn't want to just make a good song, but rather make a great album." says Aziatic. "The album is very musical." Aziatic went on to say " Recording an album is not only about filling up the album with your voice, but allowing the instruments the opportunity to create emotions within the song." -the finale- is a portal to the future of Garifuna music. In an industry where most artist take advantage of what is in at that particular moment by recreating the same sound that the other artist may be doing, Aziatic steps outside the box and does it his way. -the finale- in all aspects is in a class of it's own, with sounds of heart stomping Punta Rock music and traditional Paranda music. As to whether this is truly Aziatic's final performance, all evidence points to "yes", however "jam96x" was a grand opening, -the finale- is undisputedly the grand closing.
