Details: About Christopher On any given day you can find Christopher rummaging the children's tees section of a second-hand store or looking for the perfect pair of girls' jeans at an American Eagle. He spent about a year on unemployment after being laid off from a music store. He likes to think of this time as his "Dude Period" derived from his favorite movie, The Big Lebowski, even drinking White Russians for inspiration writing Photographs. Other things that inspire him are campfires, large congregations of people, good conversation, and, of course, music itself. The main reason he's doing landscaping right now is to keep off the beer belly. And the best beer for Chris is the one in his hand. He fancies himself as a damn good ping-pong player. Other favorite things of his are driving his pickup, playing the black keys of the piano, staying in hotel rooms, getting his hair done, eating sausage, and watching anything with Larry David. How'd it Happen? Emerging from the obscurity of today's of punk/emo scene, Christopher was recently challenged by producer and friend J.T. Burke to write an album of everything he was feeling, with no genre barriers. One and a half years later the two came out of the studio with a relevant, focused, unique product- "Photographs". A band has been recently formed around Christopher and is playing out to eager crowds.
