Indie Folk 9 MP3 Songs FOLK: Modern Folk, ELECTRONIC: Ambient Details: I was six years old when I picked up a guitar; I was six and a half when I quit. There was one chord that frustrated me to no end and it was another eight months before I was willing to try again. I held on to that second try through childhood, playing with my Dads pedals and recording into a mini-cassette player I borrowed from my mom. I entered my teen years and played electric guitar in a band; we worshipped noise and uncomfortable sounds and when that band disintegrated, I found an acoustic guitar, a bunch of other instruments, and my own sound with a more folk like twist. I recorded a couple of albums in a couple of years; I operated on the principle that if none of my tools sounded professional, I would emphasize that handicap. After high school I left my small New York suburb for a small college town upstate. I got lost there, and when I returned for the summer I decided I wouldnt go back. I finished out the next semester, moved to New York City, and began playing shows. My most recent album Uprooted was recorded in my tiny new apartment, which might explain the claustrophobic feeling of my new songs." -Peter
