Covers plenty of ground, easing through rock, psychedelia, and pop without ever losing focus. The album goes from insistent power chording to dreamy vocals and backwards guitars, all tied together by a dynamic rhythm section and three part vocals. 11 MP3 Songs POP: Power Pop, ROCK: Psychedelic

Details: The Sterling Loons formed in late 2002 to play the songs from what was originally planned to be a solo record from singer/guitarist Eamon Nordquist. The chemistry of all three members was too good and before the members knew it they were a band. The album "What to do in Trouble" is the debut from this group and showcases their style hard rocking psychedelic pop. Drummer Jeff Brown can also be heard playing bass and singing backing vocals in Seattle's Downpilot (downpilot.com). Eamon Nordquist can be heard playing guitar and singing backing vocals on several records by Seattle's legendary Truly (see robertrothmusic.com). John Kornstein has been busy all summer playing lead guitar for the Seattle production of "Hedwig and the Angry Inch".
