Rons body of work includes music production for Ashley Clark who along with his band The Clark Brothers recently won the American Idol produced reality series The Next Great American Band on the FOX Network. With the release of his new record, What You Hide Is What You Find, Ron has effectively created a propulsive blend of hook laden pop tunes that enter your head and refuse to leave. I went to the songwriters school of The Beatles. You really cant deny structure and power of melodies that have withstood the test of time. Rons life-long goal is to create universally recognized songs that are both distinguished and compelling, while making his contribution to popular music. Ive written with so many other writers that really try and make it a science, and I always think to myself, Its just music, if you make it hard for yourself you just might miss the magic. Nature happens on its own and I want to be an open channel to capture that unconstrained timeless creative nature. The Albany Times Union has described his music as harkening back to the Beatles pop sound and The Atlanta Journal-Constitution labeled him a pop-powered guitarist, keen praises that depict the artistic and poignant musician.
