In 1969 DUANE ALLMAN asked EDDIE HINTON to sing and play guitar in the new Southern Rock band he was putting together. Eddie was the first person Duane asked to join him in his new group, that became known as THE ALLMAN BROTHERS BAND. Eddie turned Duane down to pursue a career as a singer/songwriter. "Eddie Hinton was thought of as a wonderboy," said JERRY WEXLER, the producer co-founder of Atlantic Records who did so much to put Southern Soul music on the map. "We all reckoned it was only a matter of time before he became a superstar." EDDIE HINTON sings lead on 7 songs and plays guitar on 11 cuts on BANDCESTORS. This is Eddie singing and playing guitar - both before and during his prime. His vocals on this CD are electrifying! "The collection opens BRILLIANTLY", writes Ben Windham in THE TUSCALOOSA NEWS, "with Hinton singing his Otis Redding heart out on a classic Southern soul ballad, "Nice Girl"." These songs are from LOST TAPES from the '60s '70s with 15 previously unreleased recordings . . . out of the vault and straight into your heart! Eddie died nearly ten years ago but he still has many fans all over the USA and in Europe. "OUTSTANDING!!! What a fantastic project", says Bill Aylward, film director from Portland, Oregon.
