Utilising a wide array of instruments to produce progressive, original, intense folk-rock compositions, the songs are dark, beautiful, intense and thoughtful with tightrope melodies and meditative undertones. Meeting through university, work and spiritual pursuits 12 months ago, The Dharma Bums, have played numerous venues across the UK incorporating guitars, pianos, violin, flute, mandolin, electronic effects and percussion into their captivating live performances. Influences: The Dharma Bums have been influenced by a range of musicians including Van Morrison, Joanna Newsom, Bright Eyes, Radiohead, Devendra Banhart, Bonnie Prince Billy, Jose Gonzales, Mogwai, Four Tet, Autechre, Aphex Twin, Boards of Canada, Bjork, Nick Drake, John Martyn and Neil Young. 2007 Magazine Reviews: "Plymouth septet, The Dharma Bums, may cram the stage with an array of guitars, keyboards, strings and seats but their hushed, fragile acoustics reveal a band that know a few things about restraint. Caught somewhere between the tight-rope melodies of Bright Eyes and the lofty vocal idiosyncrasies of Mercury Rev, the band mine a rich seam of acoustic/folk-orientated pop that isn't afraid to take it's time to develop and shine. Very promising." "Homegrown folk-pop heroes The Dharma Bums kept everyone spellbound with their multi-layered bitter-sweet tones and euphoric climaxes" "The Dharma Bums were, once again, on the money with their ever-infectious, quiet positivity"
