TROPICAL SONG OF THE YEAR for CORAZON, CORAZON!" Below are some comments made from serveral magazines and newspaper features in reference to the Esa Album: Known for her strong vocal quality and stage presence, her transformation updates her image and sound to compliment many of the top US Latino record artists with urban and worldly beats rounding out her new sound The tropical hints delight the listeners palette and leaves the listener completely satisfied Norteo Magazine(2005) Esa set's the tone for the artist's first attempt at reaching the international Latino music market with beats and style reminiscent of Miami Sound Machine. Dancers and Latin music aficionados alike will experience the unexpected twist, the album's trademark, of multiple intermingling styles in the course of a single song.

Santa Fe New Mexican (2005) ABOUT THE ALBUM "ESA" Now Im gonna be honest, I dont know as much Spanish as I should or sometimes claim to, but when I was listening to these songs I was understanding!! And not only that, but its as if they were songs that I had written. It was like my diary, but in Spanish with music! Some of the songs sound like a hurt woman full of hate for the man who broke her heart like "Vas A Pagar," or "Mucha Mujer." Then there are the songs that are pure heartbreak songs like "Si Me Dejaras," "Prisionera de Tu Amor," and a playful little song called "De La Boca Para Afuera," which pretty much says I know what you said, but you dont mean it so Im gonna stick around anyway. Then those songs that are like pep talks to yourself, to just forget, be strong and move on like, "Corazon," "Olvidalo," and "Esa." Then just to complete the list of songs theres Con El which is pretty much giving some other girl the ok to put the movida on the ex, and "Como Le Digo," which is about me wanting to trade in my guy for his best friend. Like I said, its all over the place, but thats how people are! No one can deny it and everyone goes through it at least once. I received these songs at a time when I was all over the place trying to understand what love was all about. Its like I wanted to hate not just the person who broke my heart, but the emotion itself. But those proved IMPOSSIBLE! Love sucks, its stupid, is what I told everyone, but I didnt think that at all!! I was just putting on a show so I could look tough. Thats what people do. The way I see it, if you are completely over something, its no longer a part of your life, you have no emotion for it. Hate is an emotion. I think its more of a cover-up word for a forbidden passion. So in a way, these are love songs! You always hate something you want, something you dont posses. I was trying my hardest to recover from this heartbreak and it was so easy for me to relate to these songs, therefore it was easy to sing them because its what I felt, I really think you can hear that connection when you listen to them. Its so cool to be so connected to these songs when I didnt even write them, cuz it makes me think how many other people can connect to them the way I did? This album is important, not only because its my first CD that I will introduce to the world and try to make it further with, but because these songs are mine! I hope you enjoy them! Besos, Jenna
