The soundtrack features four of his original songs. Sean formed roadmoviemusic.com- alt/rock folk/pop with various musicians. Catchy pop melodies, spoken rants, tight harmonies, and thundering bass and rhythm, it's been described as "A Thunderstorm on the rides at Disneyland". Roadmoviemusic musicians: Anna Bocci (former host- TLC While You Were Out)-Vocals Scott McClain (formerly of the band CATAHULA)- Drums Sean Costello (formerly of the band SPLINTERS)- Bass Look and Listen at roadmoviemusic.com for upcoming dates, listening to tracks and to sign his mailing list. Catch him live in LA at The Knitting Factory, The Derby, LARGO, Genghis Cohen, the Hotel Cafe, the Cat Club, etc. His forthcoming self-titled CD -"ROADMOVIE" - chronicles of a 16 year old runaway pyromaniac- will be available soon, but in the meantime, visit the site to get a hold of a 5 song demo (an advance copy). Sean's live solo CD "Smoker" is definitely a journey for the audience designed with a beginning, middle and an end. From a buyer: "I listened to Smoker on my way to visit my brother. I actually cried. Your voice -- rough edges and smooth crests at the same time. You walk a really thin line between hard-edged humor and real honest emotion."

That's a hard one to walk, and you do it exceptionally well." Although it's intended to be heard "live", without interruption, each song still stands on it's own. Sean hails from Central NY with a BS in Acting/Directing from Syracuse University. Upon graduating, he landed the lead role "Jean" in the critically acclaimed PBS AMERICAN PLAYHOUSE presentation of MISS JULIE. After the project wrapped, Sean decided to travel... the entire United States. He packed a VW van and covered a twenty-state tour in ten months playing guitar and performing his unique blend of spoken word and acoustic rock from NYC to Houston to Los Angeles. Ending up in Hollywood with $20, Sean worked to get an apartment and has been West Coast based ever since.
