Details: After playing shows in the barn of their family farm in Waitakere, New Zealand, Calico Brothers broke into the modern music scene in 2008 with their debut EP, God Left Town. After great reviews, shows throughout New Zealand and the inclusion of the title track on the double-platinum selling Outrageous Fortune soundtrack, February 2009 found the band in the studio with a bag full of new songs and other things. A basement studio. A live set up. The warmth of Turkish rugs. Tracks laid down with a minimum of fuss. The sessions effortlessly soulful performances are the product of the Calicos rapport and their respect for many musical traditions. The result is the band's latest album, Tell it to the Sun, which fuses Jimmy Calico's homespun intonation with Chet OConnells twanging Telecaster guitar. Added to this, Jeff Calicos Merseyside bass playing and Robbie Calicos humble drums form the perfect foundation for keyboardist Fran Johansson to interweave baby grand, Hammond and Wurlitzer. On top of all this is the bands biggest asset: their vocal harmonies. Live with Tell it to the Sun for a week in your car and youll drive safer. Put it on in your living room and youll start watching less TV. Go and see the band live and youll remember what it is that got you into music in the first place. Calico Brothers: Three brothers, one cousin, one friendall good.
