--Folktronica for capitalist children-- Sounding like an Antifolk addict raised by TV in a shopping mall, this is the perfect soundtrack for all bookworm material girls and boys, who dare to be. 10 MP3 Songs in this album (30:04) ! Related styles: FOLK: Anti-Folk, POP: Synth Pop People who are interested in Woody Guthrie Rilo Kiley Hot Chip should consider this download. Details: Sounding like the Antifolk addicted brainchild of the beloved "Postal Service" Boo Hoo sparkles with slightly strange ideas in his lyrics: Growing up in supermarkets, talking to dogs or dying next to Morrissey, etc. His live shows vary from dancy electro-pop partys including casio versions of the ALF-theme to stripped down acoustic shows with folky flair, halfway between Phil Ochs and Kimya Dawson. While his very own version of the Blink 182 classic "What's my age again" became an underground hit in his hometown Frankfurt/Germany and adorable german indie blogs like "Jackpot Baby!" the title track of his debut ep "Heartbeatspeed" appeared in the 2007 playlists of several european webradio stations from France to Greece. In the last two years Boo Hoo himself was playing concerts in villages, on festivals and vegetarian indie clubs from Hamburg to Switzerland and back. Currently he can be found waiting for you to order his first full length Hypermarch (2008), remixing tracks by fellow singers/songwriters, changing his mood on his myspace page or writing call and response songs about Doogie Howser.
