Kieran Wade is a Dublin-born singer/ songwriter and musician who has spent most of his life immersed in the world of Irish traditional music. He first started playing Irish music in a group while at college in Manchester and played mainly in folk clubs around the Lancashire area. His musical development continued when he moved to Canada, at the beginning playing the banjo in traditional sessions and moving on to play at many of the folk festivals that are a big feature of summer life in Canada and the U.S. He was a founder member of the Inishowen cil band and the bands many appearances over the years at cils, clubs, sessions and festivals helped hone his skills on the tenor banjo. In the mid 80s Kieran also joined Tip Splinter, at the time one of Canadas foremost Irish/ Canadian traditional bands. Tip were initially started out as an off-shoot of the Toronto Irish Players theatre group, and played a mix of both Irish and Canadian folk material, along with some original stuff from members of the band. It was after joining Tip Splinter that Kierans singing and song writing skills started to develop and over the course of 4 albums recorded with Tip, some of his songs became an established part of the bands repertoire. Since returning to Ireland in the early 90s, family commitments have kept gigging to a minimum but he still plays at traditional music sessions in Dublin and has had musical tours to China and the Czech Republic with Br Bor. Some of his songs have been recorded by various artists in Ireland and Canada, most recently by Sean Keane on his latest CD The Irish Scattering In the meantime, Kierans album of original material titled Across the Western Ocean is now available on CD and includes 3 tracks which were first recorded with Tip Splinter.
