The musical sensibilities of Sting, the candor of The Beatles, and the the lilt of Joni Mitchell with a dollop of Steely Dan added at the last minute for a marbling effect. 11 MP3 Songs POP: 70's Pop, ROCK: Classic Rock Details: The featured song, A House Divided, a rock anthem with orchestra, choir, and ethnic instruments, took Levine 20 years to finish writing. I wanted to show the indomitable spirit in action calling out to its collective self to unite, not unlike the villain in Terminator 2 who, after hes apparently destroyed, is recreated when his scattered beads of molten metal coalesce into his former self. (So what's wrong with mixed metaphors?) The 122-track recording was mixed three times before it was ready for mastering. Los Angeles producer G Tom Macs first words in response to his initial listening of On The Fence was Its fg brilliant! About compatibility issues in a couples relationship, On The Fence suggests The Beatles mixed with contemporary folk-rock. If the cello lines dont remind you of Beatles producer George Martin, nothing will. The rest of the album largely comments on environmental and spiritual themes from the Sting-like The Mother Tongue, the Joni Mitchellesque The Man Upstairs, to the jazzy, cinematic Beautiful featuring the spoken word of Levines 5-year-old son, Andrew. The album finishes with A Home That Forever Will Stand sung by Traci Harris--a rousing gospel piece for people of all religions that has received a grand prize and two first place songwriting awards.
