Dear Reader, If only the tables were turned and our pets really could train us! Have you ever wished you could read the mind of your loyal best friend? It sure would make co-habitation easier, wouldn't it? It's a good bet that there isn't a dog owner out there who hasn't had to reprimand their pet for bad behavior. It runs the gambit from using your footwear as chew toys clear up to using your new carpet as a toilet! You know how kids sometimes will act out just for attention? We hear that message loud and clear. . .notice me! Our children will work hard to get our attention even if it's negative attention. Our pets are no different. If we aren't giving them what they perceive as their just due - bad attention is better than no attention at all, right? Don't we all wish that we had the perfect pet? When we selected that cute little puppy how could we know that it would grow into this large, hairy, slobbering goliath! Like that character in the Peanut cartoon who walks around with a cloud hanging over him, that cute little canine whose behavior was soooo adorable as a puppy now carries a cloud of dirt, dust and hair wherever he (or she) ventures. Sometimes the challenges we experience with our dogs escalates out of control. When the neighbors start complaining about the barking you are fast approaching the tipping point where you may have to face finding a new home for your family pet. Is there a solution? Yes. Ask yourself these three questions: 1. What if you could retrain a nervous dog? 2. What if you were able to curb the barking? 3. What if there were a way to end the chewing of your possessions? Well, you can, it's possible and we'd like to show you just how easy it is. How Do You Change Bad Behavior? It's actually quite simple. If you have the right approach AND the right tools. The right approach is just having a positive mindset and believing you can accomplish the goal. If you have the right attitude we have the right tools. You'll find them wrapped up inside the digital pages of our guide entitled "How to Understand Your Dog." What most people need is practical application.
