He lives on the outskirts of Washington DC in the Tysons Corner area and is the fifth child of a "his, mine, ours" family. When he was a young lad in Colorado, he met his neighbor over the internet who introduced him to electronic dance music and the art of DJ'ing. It became an immediate fixation in his life and spent every spare moment educating himself about the music and culture. Fast forward a few years and he met his mentor and good friend, Todd Wright. He opened his eyes to the world of song writing and home recording... a whole new approach to music for Ross. He was stuck on the fact that spinning records would be his one and only, but when he demonstrated the process, the thought was gone! Soon after, Ross started vocal and piano lessons with Grammy and DUB winner, Marty McCall. His teachings and spiritual influence helped him progress further into music and augmented a much better understanding as well. On February 24, 2006, Ross' best friend and music partner passed away in a car accident. He remixed two songs; "Satellite" by Oceanlab and "Force of Gravity" by BT in memory of him. They gained international recognition, not only by the original artists but tens of thousands all over the world. He met his good friend and song writing partner, Nate Wolfberg through his accident... ever since, they have been producing uplifting, organic hip hop music under their alias "Wolfberg n' Company." He also collaborates with seasoned professionals in the pop/rock, dance, and hip-hop world, complimenting his electronic sound with theirs. Summer of 2006, Ross signed with BLURi - a record label, magazine, and showcasing company. He came on as an "emerging artist and producer" and have been spotlighted by them to this day. They helped him put his music in the hands of over 100,000 listeners and the feedback has been very rewarding. On the flip side of his music production, Ross has had the opportunity to DJ up and down the East coast and beyond. He had the pleasure of opening for Barack Obama at his official campaign party at H2O Nightclub in Washington DC and worked with the National Wildlife Federation "Turn the Tables" campaign. They are unique events using the sound of international DJ's to help raise awareness for global warming. Ross played with producer and DJ Delphi at the parties, opening for artist such as BT, John B, Way out West, and Graffiti. Delphi and Ross also opened for Paul van Dyk and James Zabiela for Buzzlife Productions. Life and music is incredibly exciting right now for Ross... Buckle up, because this is just the beginning.
