The first introduction of his interest was inspired by steve wonder who lived around the block from Sheb Schwae in Detroit. He got the opportunity to meet Stevie through his younger brother named Tim, who he played with as a child. Tim would take Sheb Schwae downstairs to play and hear stevie experimenting with the many instruments in his home studio. His curiosity would soon drive him to ask tim to introduce him to stevie. Stevie soon took sheb schwae under his mentorship by encouraging him to play the drums in his studio; this in fact was the spark that led him to become a skilled and master drummer of r&b and most importantly reggae music. Sheb Schwae's first music recording session was with stevie, although it was a demo produced in his basement it served as a magical moment to hear the tape being played back and hearing his recorded voice with stevie wonder. According to Sheb, as small as the opportunity was it played the most significant influence in his drive to excel in the business. Growing up in Detroit exposed Sheb Schwae to the many great artists in the Motown stable and also helped to refine his style as a singer. Marvin Gaye, Smokey Robinson, David Ruffin, Stevie Wonder and Eddie Kendrick's were his favorites. The appreciation for other musical styles became apparent through funk, pop, rock, jazz, fusion and rap. Music from the middle east and Africa were picked up as a result of his travels to those regions as a child and adult. The most important influence that helped to develop his craft in producing reggae music was seeing bob marley and the wailers perform. Sheb Schwae was inspired by many other great reggae artists such as sly robbie, dennis brown, jacob miller, gregory issacs, freddie mcgregor, steel pulse, aswad, black uhuru, pato bantun, chacadimus pliers, maxi priest, beres hammon etc.... Sheb Schwae's strengths as an artist are
