Details: Bio for Sin Elen (Pronounced Shan Ellen) Sin Elen is a unique and talented singer songwriter from the West Coast of Canada. Her music could be described as acoustic light bluesy jazz OR jazzy bluesy folk. The arrangements on her debut CD Floatare refreshingly simple, yet sophisticated. The song lyrics are thoughtful and evocative. Her style has been compared to Norah Jones, Katie Melua, Joni Mitchell, Rickie Lee Jones and Margo Timmins. Sin Elen has been song writing for years, but only recently embarked on recording her creations and sharing them with the world. She studied piano and voice as a child, but guitar is her current song-writing instrument of choice. She likes to play around with altering chord voicings and progressions, which gives her songs an understated jazzy feel. Her singing style has been influenced by such singers as Bonnie Raitt and Marcia Ball, which gives it more of a bluesy bent than a formal jazz one. Sin Elen performs locally in her hometown of Victoria B.C. She is usually accompanied by percussionist Brad Hawkes who plays a number of hand drums and shakers, but primarily the cajon a unique box drum that sounds like a mellow drum kit. Talented Joey Smith on his growling double bass propels the songs on Float along while grounding and balancing out the ethereal timbre of Sin Elen's voice.
