From the land that birthed such legends as U2, The Cranberries, Van Morrison and The Corrs, comes the soulful sexy pop blend of three Irish sisters, Fiona, Nayome and Evangeline O'Neill. With the help of Mark Jackson Productions, the girls have created a sound thats reminiscent of the high energy "get up and dance" tunes of Beyonce, the lyrical smarts of Pink, and the haunting harmonies of one of their native music queens, Enya. " We want to write music of significance, songs that contain a message, that pull from our experiences and emotions and have them translate in a mainstream pop genre. Most importantly we want people to enjoy the music, to blast it on their radios and in their cars, not just because it sounds good but because they really relate to the message it contains." It seems the girls have succeeded in doing just that with dance tracks like "Its All About Me" which while pumping its electro pop melody, is an empowering song about learning the need for self-love, whereas "This Is My Brain On Music" is lyrically and musically the quintessence of the reaction of one's brain and body to the intoxicating effect of music. The sisters find the music to be a sort of "in the blood" thing that has rippled down through many generations of their family tree. Growing up in a remote village in County Kerry Ireland, the spark of creativity was ignited at a young age, and the girls spent many years training in dance/singing/drama and music. When they decided to join forces in 2002 and dubbed themselves Sirocco, their talent, drive and determination resulted in them making a name for themselves around Ireland, releasing a debut Irish Album and performing with renowned European acts like Westlife, Girls Aloud and Gareth Gates. An invitation by Governor Pataki in 2004 to sing for St. Patrick's day brought the girls to New York where they stayed for the next few years working on developing their music with industry veterans like Hall of fame drummer and drummer to The Fugees, Mr. Don1, the talented Lil Eddie, (Jennifer Lopez, Paula Abdul, Michael Jackson), the man who discovered Ashanti, Danny P. Pierre (Joss stone, Aaron Carter, Robbie Williams) and many other top songwriters in the business. In the summer of 2008, the sisters moved to the mecca of entertainment , Hollywood, California where they began work with Mark Jackson and Ian Scott, which has since resulted in their new sound. Their song "Brain On Music" has already been accepted into the phenomenally successful online dance game "Audition" and as their name Sirocco suggests, it shouldn't be long before this warm breeze gains its momentum and takes the world by storm."
