It's Aimee Mann, Tori Amos, and They Might Be Giants all wrapped up in a tasty sushi roll that goes great with both tea and scotch. 5 MP3 Songs POP: Quirky, POP: Folky Pop Details: Amy Curl and Dan Kennedy stay busy in Madison creating panoptic pop music that ranges from folky acoustic to quirky indie. Although the lyrics sometimes stray into the humorous, sarcastic, and, indeed, often the ridiculous, they do try to maintain an irony-free approach. Irony has ruined everything, says Dan. If you hear us playing some unexpected cover song its because we love it, not because its funny for us to do it. Of course, it may be funny too, but honesty is where the intent lies. Amy and Dan are currently touring in support of two releases on Slothrop Music. Their first recording, In An Orderly Fashion is a spare and subtle blend of voice, piano, and acoustic guitar. We like to hear a lot of air, says Amy. As Miles Davis said, Dont play whats there, play whats not there. This spacious approach to arranging comes through even when backed by a full band as on their latest record Sharing a Head. In the studio or on the stage, doing justice to the song is the top priority for this twosome, and often that means leaving plenty of space for the song to be what it wants to be. Amy and Dan have been crossing paths on the Madison music scene for years, Amy playing solo shows (her album Mixed Bag was nominated for best acoustic album at the Madison Area Music Awards), and Dan backing up singer-songwriters like Mark Croft, Chris DeMay, and Sean Michael Dargan on guitar and bass. When Amy was recruited as a pianist and singer for a wedding band that Dan was playing in, they jumped at the chance to work together. The band stereotypically imploded, and our dynamic duo found themselves transitioning into a new musical partnership as the dust settled. We just kept showing up for practice, and pretty soon there we were, working out our own songs together, says Dan. ...excellent at keeping each song in its own universe...lyrics are intellectual and challengingand begging for attention. this is a clean, fresh breath of air. Ricks Caf So we come back around to their own songs. Honest and silly, quiet and crashing, expansive and intimate--its panoptic pop, and it goes well with both tea and scotch. People who are interested in Mirah Adam Green should consider this download.
