Details: When Alan Ginsberg said, "The only poetic tradition is the voice out of the burning bush," it's possible that he meant that good art should always have something of the divine, strange, and unexplainable. You'll find Chicago, Illinois' Berry in this poetic tradition. Fusing abrasive indie minimalism with rock urgency and Beatles-esque melodic sense, Berry seeks beauty and power in the unlikely and uncomfortable. Since 2002, Paul Goodenough, Joey Lemon, and Matt Aufrecht have been writing, performing and recording their innovative indie rock, culminating with 2005's acclaimed Marraige LP, 2007's Empaty EP, and more than 200 shows regionally and nationally. Amidst the the recent departure of several band mates, these three friends have holed up in their Humboldt Park house-turned recording studio to record more than 100 songs spread across 5 albums in 2007 and 2008. With a tireless work ethic and a mesmerizing live performance, Berry is poised to spread their growing vision of the divine, the strange, and the unexplainable to an eager, growing, and devoted nationwide audience.
